FIELD INSTALLATION DIRECTORY

OVERVIEW

This directory is intended as a tool for locating Department of Justice (DOJ) domestic and foreign field installation addresses, telephone numbers and titles of persons in charge. The component field installations listed in this directory are in alphabetical order by the city in which they are located. Only the 16 DOJ components which have field offices are included. The functions statement for each organization focuses on the activities of the field operations.

The directory lists Regional, District and Headquarters component field installations in the Department of Justice. Also included are maps for each component showing field installation locations within the United States, and an organizational chart for each component. A map showing the foreign field installations is at the back of the directory.

Not included in the directory listings or location maps are field installations such as Resident Agencies, Resident Offices, and individual Border Patrol and Port of Entry Offices.

This directory is maintained by the Management and Planning Staff (MPS) of the Justice Management Division and will be updated periodically, as necessary. It is requested that each DOJ component included in this directory submit information concerning any changes for its field installation to the MPS by mail to Suite 7000, Patrick Henry Building, 601 D Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20530, or by facsimile to (202) 501-8307.

OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR GENERAL

OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR GENERAL

Introduction

The Office of the Inspector General (OIG) provides leadership and assists management to promote economy, efficiency, and effectiveness within the Department of Justice. The OIG enforces Federal fraud, waste, abuse, and integrity laws and regulations within the Department and identifies for prosecution those individuals or organizations involved in financial, contractual, or criminal misconduct in Department of Justice programs and operations. The OIG carries out this mission through its four Divisions: Audit, Investigations, Inspections, and Management and Planning. Headquartered in Washington, D.C., the OIG's regional, field, and area offices can be found in Georgia, Illinois, Texas, Colorado, Virginia, Florida, California, New York, Puerto Rico, Washington, Arizona and Washington, D.C.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

Introduction

Federal law places upon the Attorney General responsibility for the conduct of all litigation affecting the interest of the United States. This responsibility is discharged by delegating authority to officers throughout the country to handle such litigation and to appear in the various federal courts as the government's advocates. These field officers are the United States Attorneys.

U.S. Attorneys are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate for terms of four years, or at the pleasure of the President. The United States Attorneys and their assistants are responsible for the vast bulk of the criminal and civil litigation for the United States.

There are 93 U.S. Attorneys stationed throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Northern Marianas. One U.S. Attorney is assigned to each judicial district, with the exception of Guam and the Northern Marianas, where a single U.S. Attorney serves in both districts. U.S. Attorneys perform their responsibilities with the support of over 4,200 Assistant U.S. Attorneys and approximately 4,700 non-attorney personnel.

The U.S. Attorneys and their Assistant U.S. Attorneys must be residents of the districts to which they are appointed. This requirement does not apply to the District of Columbia or the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, which require residence within 20 miles of the district.

ANTITRUST DIVISION

ANTITRUST DIVISION

Introduction

The mission of the Antitrust Division is to promote and maintain competition in the United States economy by enforcing the Federal antitrust laws. Such enforcement, which is the principal function of the Division, involves investigating possible antitrust violations, conducting grand jury proceedings, preparing and trying antitrust cases, prosecuting appeals, and negotiating and enforcing final judgments.

Private anticompetitive conduct is subject to criminal and civil action under the Sherman and Clayton Acts, statutes that prohibit conspiracies in restraint of trade, monopolization and anticompetitive mergers. Through participation in executive branch, regulatory and legislative processes, the Antitrust Division seeks to ensure that government action is procompetitive.

Field Staff

Seven field offices, located throughout the country, handle both criminal and civil enforcement. Field offices are located in Atlanta, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, New York, Philadelphia, and San Francisco. Approximately half of the Division's attorneys are located in the field. Each field office handles local and regional matters arising in its respective area. However, a field office also may handle nationwide matters that arise in part within its jurisdiction.

The field offices report to the Director of the Office of Operations in Washington, D.C. The Director assigns cases and other matters to the offices on the basis of the commodity or service involved, the geographic area involved, the type of violation, and the availability of resources. All pleadings, memoranda, reports and other legal documents requiring review that originate in the field offices are submitted to the Director of Operations for review and approval, and, when appropriate, for transmittal to a Deputy Assistant Attorney General and the Assistant Attorney General, or other appropriate Division office.

The seven field offices of the Antitrust Division are responsible for conducting investigations and handling litigation, both civil and criminal, and negotiating, enforcing, and monitoring consent judgments within their geographic areas of jurisdiction. These offices function in the same fashion as the general litigating sections in Washington, and have the additional responsibility of being the Division's field liaison with U.S. Attorneys, state attorneys general and other law enforcement agencies within their areas.

The field offices investigate allegations of bid-rigging or fraud by contractors on various state and municipal contracts. They also frequently deal with price-fixing, bid-rigging and other contractor/supplier violations with respect to various federal agencies such as the Department of Defense, the Department of Transportation and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

CIVIL

CIVIL DIVISION

Introduction

The Civil Division represents the United States government and its employees in most areas of civil law and in some criminal litigation. Its cases reflect the diversity of government activities, involving, for example, the defense of challenges to presidential domestic and foreign policy initiatives; the defense and assertion of statutory and regulatory programs and actions; national security issues; benefit programs; energy policies; commercial issues such as contract disputes, banking, insurance, patents, fraud, and debt collection; all manner of accident and liability claims in connection with government activities; and criminal violations of the immigration and consumer protection laws.

Each year, Civil Division attorneys handle thousands of cases that collectively involve billions of dollars in claims and recoveries. Numerous cases involve significant policy issues, which often rise to constitutional dimensions. The Division directly litigates or oversees the litigation of cases in all federal district courts, U.S. Courts of Appeals, the U.S. Claims Court, the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, the Court of International Trade, other federal and state courts, and the courts of foreign nations.

The Civil Division has six litigating components: the Federal Programs Branch, the Commercial Litigation Branch, the Torts Branch, the Appellate Staff, the Office of Immigration Litigation, and the Office of Consumer Litigation. Only the Torts and Commercial Litigation Branches operate field offices.

Torts Branch Field Staff

While the Torts Branch handles a wide and diverse range of legal issues, its two small field offices specialize in the litigation of admiralty, shipping, and aviation cases.

In these areas, the Branch represents the government as an owner of ships and regulator of the nation's coastal waters and inland waterways. Its admiralty litigation includes suits for personal injury and property damage involving vessels, shore installations, and maritime personnel, equipment, and cargoes; suits arising out of contracts involving shipping, chartering of vessels, and the construction, repair, and salvaging of vessels; proceedings to enforce navigation and shipping laws; litigation based on international maritime agreements; and issues of pollution in navigable waters.

The Branch's aviation litigation arises from damages involving government-owned aircraft or resulting from the government's role in air traffic control, aircraft and airport certification, and dissemination of weather information.

The Torts Branch maintains small field offices in New York City and San Francisco. Since they deal primarily with admiralty and shipping litigation, the field offices are located in these two cities to be close to the sites of litigation and the maritime courts (the U.S. Admiralty Court).

Commercial Litigation Branch Field Staff

The Commercial Litigation Branch is responsible for litigation associated with the government's diverse financial involvements. This litigation includes all monetary suits involving contracts; actions to foreclose on government mortgages and liens; bankruptcy and insolvency proceedings; and suits against guarantors and sureties. The Branch asserts and defends the interests of the government in intellectual property matters. It also prosecutes claims for the recovery of losses resulting from frauds upon federal programs and contracts.

The Commercial Litigation Branch maintains an International Trade Field Office in New York City to litigate customs and international trade matters before the Court of International Trade located there. This office is responsible for cases involving tariff classification and valuation of imported merchandise; the collection of import duties; and a variety of other actions involving the administration of the customs laws of the United States.

Within the Commercial Litigation Branch, the Office of Foreign Litigation is responsible for all legal proceedings in foreign tribunals against diplomatic and consular agents of the United States and civilian or military personnel stationed abroad who are being sued for acts that they have performed in the course of their government service. The Office of Foreign Litigation also provides international judicial assistance to foreign and international tribunals; pursues claims on behalf of the United States; and defends and asserts the government's financial and commercial interests in foreign countries and under foreign treaties. Decisions in this area often have significant foreign policy implications.

The Branch's Office of Foreign Litigation has one attorney stationed in Munich, Germany, to coordinate litigation involving the United States in European courts.

CRIMINAL DIVISION

CRIMINAL DIVISION

Introduction

The Criminal Division develops, enforces, and supervises the application of all federal criminal laws except those specifically assigned to the Antitrust, Civil Rights, Environment and Natural Resources, and Tax Divisions. The Division, along with 94 U.S. Attorneys' Offices, has the responsibility for overseeing criminal matters under more than 900 statutes as well as certain civil litigation incidental to federal law enforcement activities.

In addition to its direct litigation responsibilities, the Division formulates and implements criminal enforcement policy and provides advice and assistance. For example, the Division approves or monitors sensitive areas of law enforcement such as participation in the Witness Security Program and the use of electronic surveillance; advises the Attorney General, Congress, the Office of Management and Budget and the White House on matters of criminal law; provides legal advice and assistance to federal prosecutors and investigative agencies; and provides leadership for coordinating international as well as federal, state, and local law enforcement matters.

The Division includes a number of offices and sections, most of which operate out of Headquarters in Washington, D.C. Only two organizations of the Division include a field office.

Field Staff

Fraud Section

The Fraud Section directs and coordinates the federal effort against fraud and white collar crime, focusing primarily on frauds that involve: multi-district and international activities; financial institutions; government programs and procurement procedures, including defense procurement fraud and Housing and Urban Development (HUD) fraud; the securities and commodities exchanges; and consumer victimization. The Section conducts investigations and prosecutes certain fraud cases of national significance or great complexity.

The Fraud Section maintains a Bank Fraud Task Force field office in Dallas, Texas. This office focuses on criminal cases arising within the jurisdiction of the Federal bank regulatory agencies, especially those institutions that have failed due to insider defalcation.

Office of International Affairs

The Office of International Affairs supports the Department's legal divisions, the U.S. Attorneys, and state and local prosecutors regarding questions of foreign and international law, including issues related to extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties. The Office also coordinates all international evidence gathering. In concert with the State Department, the Office of International Affairs engages in the negotiation of new extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties and executive agreements throughout the world. Office attorneys also participate in a number of committees established under the auspices of the United Nations and other international organizations that are directed at resolving a variety of international law enforcement problems such as narcotics trafficking and money laundering.

The Office of International Affairs maintains a permanent field office in Rome, Italy. This office supports the Division in the formulation and execution of international criminal justice enforcement policies. It participates in the negotiation of international agreements and treaties on subjects relating to criminal law enforcement, extradition, mutual legal assistance, and prisoner transfers; preparing, processing, and supervising extradition matters before Federal courts; providing advice to U.S. Attorneys and state attorneys general on preparing extradition requests and on international foreign practice and procedure; coordinating and reviewing all requests to and from foreign governments and courts to obtain evidence for criminal matters being investigated or prosecuted either in the United States or abroad; drafting legislation relating to its function; supervising prisoner transfers under 18 U.S.C. 4102; and developing Division and Departmental policy on those aspects of federal criminal law enforcement that require extraterritorial involvement.

ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES DIVISION

ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES DIVISION

Introduction

The mission of the Environment and Natural Resources Division is, through litigation in the Federal and state courts, to acquire and manage public lands and natural resources; protect and manage Indian rights and property; and to safeguard and enhance the American environment.

The Environment and Natural Resources Division represents the United States in all matters concerning the protection, use and development of the nation's natural resources and public lands, wildlife protection, Indian rights and claims, and the acquisition of federal property. The Division is responsible for litigation at the frontiers of law, ranging from protection of endangered species, to global climate change, to cleaning up the nation's hazardous waste sites. Nearly one-half of the Division's lawyers are involved in enforcing the nation's civil and criminal environmental laws in order to protect its citizens' health and the environment. The Division also defends environmental challenges to government programs and activities.

The Headquarters office in Washington, D.C., is comprised of sections which focus on specific areas of the Division's responsibilities, that is: Environmental Crimes; Environmental Enforcement; Environmental Defense; Wildlife and Marine Resources; General Litigation; Indian Resources; Land Acquisition; Policy, Legislation and Special Litigation; Appellate work; and the Executive Office, which serves as administrator to the Division.

Field Staff

The Division includes a small staff component in the field. The field installations are basically extensions of the Division's responsibilities as carried out from the Headquarters office. Field offices are in Agana, Guam; and in six U.S. cities, that is, Anchorage, Alaska; Chicago, Illinois; Denver, Colorado; Sacramento, California; San Francisco, California; and Seattle, Washington.

These field offices do not have directors, but staff (sometimes only one or two attorneys) report to the appropriate Section Chief in the Washington, D.C., office. The field staff in each region may represent one or more of the sections named above, for example, the field offices in Denver represent four different sections.

The field office locations were determined based on the number of cases arising in those areas, for the purpose of avoiding extensive travel by Washington, D.C., staff to handle the cases.

TAX

TAX DIVISION

Introduction

The Tax Division represents the United States and its officers in all civil litigation arising under the internal revenue laws in all courts except the U.S. Tax Court; supervises or directly handles all criminal tax prosecutions; and litigates all Federal civil tax cases appealed to the United States courts of appeals and State Appellate courts.

The mission of the Tax Division whose principal client is the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is to ensure fair and uniform interpretation of tax laws, and standards of criminal tax prosecution. In accomplishing its mission the Tax Division collects federal revenues through the institution of many types of civil actions at the request of the IRS, and defends tax refund and a variety of other civil suits brought by taxpayers. The Division enforces the criminal tax laws by generally supervising criminal investigations and prosecutions and by directly handling certain investigations and prosecutions. It also handles all appellate tax cases, both civil and criminal.

The bulk of the Tax Division's civil and criminal trial work and all of the Division's appellate work is handled by attorneys based in Washington, D.C. The only field offices are located in Dallas, Texas, where a staff of civil trial attorneys operate under the direction of the Civil Trial Section, Southern Region and a criminal attorney, working with the Dallas Bank Fraud Task Force, operates under the direction of the Criminal Enforcement Section Southern Region.

Field Staff

The Tax Division maintains a staff of approximately 32 persons, including approximately 23 attorneys, in Dallas, Texas. The Civil Field office in Dallas which is responsible for representing the United States in a wide variety of civil tax litigation in Texas, operates under the direction of the Civil Trial Section, Southern Region and is responsible for civil tax matters in the state of Texas. The Criminal Enforcement Section, Southern Region, has one attorney resident in Dallas, where that attorney works with the Dallas Bank Fraud Task Force. The Dallas Bank Fraud Task Force combines the resources of the FBI, IRS, Federal Bank Examiners, the Department's Criminal Division Fraud Section, and United States Attorneys' Offices, in a team effort to investigate financial institution fraud. The presence of a field staff in Dallas conserves the Tax Division's travel time and funds by avoiding travel by Headquarters staff.

BUREAU OF PRISONS

BUREAU OF PRISONS

Introduction

The mission of the Bureau of Prisons is to protect society by carrying out the judgments of the Federal courts through providing confinement services to committed offenders and providing program opportunities to all inmates who qualify and who wish to participate. This confinement function complements other sentencing options available to Federal judges.

The Bureau's mission includes the responsibility to maintain secure, safe, and humane correctional institutions for individuals placed in the care and custody of the Attorney General; develop and operate correctional programs that seek a balanced application of the concepts of punishment, deterrence, incapacitation, and rehabilitation; and provide, primarily through the National Institute of Corrections, assistance to State and local correctional agencies.

The Bureau of Prisons Central Office staff in Washington, D.C. have primary responsibility for planning, policy development, budget development, monitoring the quality of programs and services, public information activities, legal and legislative affairs, directing research and evaluation projects, designing automated information systems, and direction of the nationwide manufacturing programs of Federal Prisons Industries (trade name UNICOR). In addition, the staff of the Central Office are responsible for the control and coordination of all the activities of the agency, including six Regional Offices and 67 institutions.

Field Staff

The Bureau of Prisons is administered from its Central Office and six geographically based regional offices, located in Philadelphia, PA; Annapolis Junction, MD; Atlanta, GA; Dallas, TX; Kansas City, MO; and Belmont, CA. Each regional office is headed by an experienced career Bureau manager who is a full member of the Bureau's Executive Staff.

In addition to its Regional Offices, the Bureau of Prisons operates institutions throughout the country, with varied levels of security, including U.S. Penitentiaries (USP), Federal Correctional Institutions (FCI), and Federal Prison Camps (FPC), as well as administrative facilities such as Metropolitan Correction Centers (MCC) and medical centers.

Staff in the Regional Offices include a regional director, deputy regional director, and administrators in such areas as human resources management, education, health services, financial management, unit/case management, correctional services, psychology services, facilities development and operations, food service, and community corrections. The multidisciplinary staff maintain close contact with all facets of Bureau operations. There is also a regional office legal counsel.

Regional Office staff offer management and technical assistance to institution and community corrections personnel. They conduct workshops, conferences, and specialized training programs, give technical assistance to State and local criminal justice agencies and contract with community agencies to provide offender placement in community corrections centers.

DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION

DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION

Introduction

The Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) is the primary narcotics enforcement agency for the United States, as well as one of the largest regulatory bodies in the Federal Government, regulating the entire controlled substances industry.

The mission of the DEA is to enforce the controlled substances laws and regulations of the United States and to bring to the criminal and civil justice system of the United States or any other competent jurisdiction, those organizations, and principal members of organizations, involved in the growing, manufacture, or distribution of controlled substances appearing in or destined for illicit traffic in the United States; and to recommend and support nonenforcement programs aimed at reducing the availability of illicit controlled substances on the domestic and international markets.

DEA provides the skeletal structure for drug law enforcement worldwide. Drug control is DEA's single mission, and DEA provides a central point of reference for efforts against all aspects of the illegal drug problem, including investigations, drug intelligence, chemical control, diversion control and regulation, and crop and laboratory eradication. Other agencies have a non-drug mission and bring special functions to particular aspects of the overall anti-drug effort. To ensure a cohesive strategy and optimum resource utilization, DEA conducts 75 percent of its investigations in cooperation with other agencies.

Field Staff

Much of the work of the Drug Enforcement Administration is accomplished through its offices in the field, both domestic and international. DEA is an organization of approximately 6,000 employees, about half of whom are Special Agents. The majority of the Special Agents operate in the field, in domestic offices and in foreign countries.

DEA has 19 Domestic Field Divisions, [and, in addition the El Paso Intelligence Center (EPIC) and the Office of Training, at Quantico, Virginia], each managed by a Special Agent in Charge. Subordinate to these Divisions are over 100 Resident Offices and some District Offices, with at least one office located in every State. The domestic field offices manage, under the program direction of the appropriate Headquarters elements, all activities relating to enforcement, intelligence, diversion control, technical operations, state and local training, and state and local task force operations, as well as personnel and general support services matters. These offices conduct liaison with other Federal, state and local law enforcement agencies concerning matters of mutual concern.

DEA maintains field installations in 48 foreign countries, with a total of 69 offices, staffed by Special Agents and support personnel. Foreign country offices collect drug intelligence of a tactical and strategic nature and exchange intelligence with host country counterparts. They maintain liaison with the Department of State, other U.S. agencies, and foreign officials to develop cooperation and support and to furnish advice on drug matters. They plan, organize and conduct individually, or as leader of a joint operation, high-level criminal investigations within the policies and laws of host countries. Another responsibility is to analyze trends in the production and traffic of licit and illicit drugs, and to report the effects on the United States, the host country and neighboring countries.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Introduction

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) is the principal investigative arm of the Department of Justice. It is charged with gathering and reporting facts, locating witnesses, and compiling evidence in criminal and civil matters in which the Federal Government is, or may be, an interested party. It also performs other duties imposed by law or Presidential directive. If a possible violation of federal law under the jurisdiction of the FBI has occurred, it will be investigated and the facts presented to the appropriate U.S. Attorney or Department of Justice official who will determine whether prosecution or further action is warranted.

The FBI is charged with investigating all violations of Federal law except those that have been assigned by legislative enactment or otherwise to another Federal agency. Its jurisdiction includes a wide range of responsibilities, covering over 250 violations of Federal law in the criminal, civil, and intelligence fields. Priority has been assigned to areas that affect society the most - foreign counterintelligence, organized crime, drugs, terrorism, white-collar crime, and violent crime.

The FBI also offers cooperative services to other Federal, state and local law enforcement agencies, such as fingerprint identification, laboratory examinations, psychological profiling, police training, Uniform Crime Reports, and the National Crime Information Center.

Field Staff

The FBI is a field-oriented organization. Ten divisions and four offices at FBI Headquarters in Washington, D.C., provide program direction and support services to 56 field offices, approximately 400 satellite offices known as resident agencies, four specialized field installations, and 18 foreign field installations.

The Bureau's investigations are conducted through its field offices, located in major cities across the Nation. The locations have been selected according to crime trends, the need for regional geographical centralization, and the need to efficiently manage resources. Each field office has a Special Agent in Charge who oversees all FBI work within a geographical territory; because of its large size, New York City's field office is managed by an Assistant Director in Charge as well as Special Agents in charge of various programs. To ensure consistency in legal training, legal advisers are appointed to assist all assigned investigative personnel in each of the FBI's field offices. These legal advisers are experienced special agents who hold law degrees.

The FBI field offices conduct their official business directly from their facilities or through approximately 400 satellite offices known as resident agencies. The number of resident agencies under each field office varies, as does the number of employees assigned to a resident agency. They range from one to a dozen or more employees. Larger resident agencies are managed by a Supervisory Senior Resident Agent who reports to the field office, or Headquarters city, which covers the area. Resident agencies, like field offices, are located where crime trends and available resources require their placement.

In addition, the FBI has 18 foreign liaison posts, each of which is headed by a Legal Attache. The Legal Attache Program is managed by the Office of Liaison and International Affairs (OLIA), FBI Headquarters, which was created in November, 1986, to combine the foreign and domestic liaison functions of the FBI into one organizational unit.

The FBI's Legal Attache Program establishes and maintains liaison with principal law enforcement and intelligence/security services in designated foreign countries. This liaison enables the FBI to effectively meet its international responsibilities in organized crime, international terrorism, foreign counterintelligence, and general criminal matters. The Legal Attache Program provides for a prompt and continuous exchange of information with foreign law enforcement and intelligence agencies; and FBI foreign-based personnel assist foreign agencies with their legitimate investigative interests in the United States.

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE

Introduction

The Attorney General has delegated authority to the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to carry out a national immigration policy that will administer and enforce the immigration laws and promote and protect the public health and safety, economic welfare, national security, and humanitarian interests of this country.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) enforces the immigration laws of the United States, and adjudicates applications for naturalization and other types of benefits available to individuals under the immigration and nationality laws. Recent immigration legislation, in 1986 and in 1990, created comprehensive revisions of the immigration laws of the United States, resulting in new and important responsibilities for the INS.

Field Staff

INS maintains an extensive field structure in carrying out its multi-faceted mission. The very nature of some of its functions, such as border patrol, requires a direct field presence. INS' mission includes the following functions: determining the admissibility of persons seeking entry, and controlling the status of aliens in the country; providing adjudication of applications and petitions submitted for INS benefits; processing naturalization and citizenship petitions and applications; apprehending and removing aliens who entered illegally; and enforcing criminal provisions against those who act or conspire to promote illegal entry and stay.

The INS organization operates through four regional offices [Eastern, Northern, Southern, and Western] which encompass the 50 States and U.S. Territories. A Regional Service Center operates in each Region. In addition, there are 33 District Offices throughout the United States; and three overseas District Offices, in Bangkok, Thailand; Mexico City, Mexico; and Rome, Italy. The Border Patrol operates 21 Sector Headquarters Offices.

U.S. MARSHALS SERVICE

U.S. MARSHALS SERVICE

Introduction

The United States Marshals Service is headed by a Director and a headquarters staff in Arlington, VA, and Presidentially-appointed U.S. Marshals serving each of the Federal judicial districts. The Marshals Service is involved at virtually every stage of the Federal criminal judicial process. U.S. Marshals are responsible for the security of more than 1,800 federal judges, and judicial facilities in more than 520 localities where proceedings take place.

The Service also has custody of all persons arrested and detained by order of the federal courts, and transports them to and from jail for court appearances. On an average day, the Marshals Service has more than 14,000 prisoners in its custody. They are housed in federal, state and local detention facilities throughout the nation.

The National Prisoner Transportation System, operated by the Service, handles hundreds of requests per day for the movement of federal prisoners between judicial districts. The Marshals Service operates a fleet of aircraft from its "hub" in Oklahoma City to move thousands of prisoners nationwide for the Service, the Bureau of Prisons, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the military, and on a space-available basis for state and local governments. The airline serves 36 cities, and has proved to be extremely cost-effective for all the agencies.

Annually the Marshals Service apprehends three-quarters of the federal fugitives returned to custody, and executes more arrest warrants than all other federal law enforcement agencies combined. Additionally, the Service has become the primary agency responsible for the extradition of fugitives apprehended in foreign countries and wanted for prosecution in the United States.

The Service operates the Witness Security Program to ensure the safety of witnesses who risk their lives testifying for the government in organized crime and major criminal activity cases. Since 1970, thousands of witnesses have been protected, relocated and provided with new identities.

The U.S. Marshals also manage and dispose of seized and forfeited money and property that are acquired with the proceeds of certain illegal activities.

The Special Operations Group is an elite force of Deputy Marshals who have volunteered for special training to respond to civil disturbances, or high threat situations where there is a violation of federal law or federal property is endangered.

Field Staff

The Marshals Service has personnel stationed at more than 400 locations throughout the 50 states, and from Guam, to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. There are approximately 2,300 Deputy U.S. Marshals, and 900 individuals serve as support staff. In addition, 1,600 contract employees serve as Court Security Officers who provide protective services for the federal judiciary in the courtrooms and at the entrances of court buildings and other judicial facilities.

There are 95 Marshals Service district offices, including two offices in the District of Columbia--one for the federal District Court and one for the Superior Court. Many of these offices also have sub-offices in other cities within the district where additional federal court facilities are located. Each district is headed by a Presidentially-appointed U.S. Marshal with a staff of Deputy Marshals and administrative personnel who are responsible for accomplishing the many missions of the Service. All district offices have similar functional responsibilities, although work load levels vary greatly among districts.

The Prisoner Transportation Division, located in Kansas City, MO, and the Air Operations Branch in Oklahoma City, OK, make up the National Prisoner Transportation System.

Organizationally, the Witness Security Program is operated from three levels: Marshals Service Headquarters; 12 regional offices; and Metro units that have Witness Security Inspectors to provide assistance to witnesses and to serve as advisors to the local Marshal on witness security matters.

In addition, eight asset seizure field offices work to maximize the net return from property seized by all Department of Justice agencies, and reinvest the property and proceeds for law enforcement use.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE FOR IMMIGRATION REVIEW

EXECUTIVE OFFICE FOR IMMIGRATION REVIEW

Introduction

The Attorney General has delegated certain aspects of his authority to administer and interpret the immigration laws to the Executive Office for Immigration Review. The Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR) is completely independent of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Headquarters and Field Staff

EOIR includes the Office of the Director, the Board of Immigration Appeals, the Office of the Chief Immigration Judge, the Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer, and the Office of Management and Administration. The EOIR exercises general supervision and direction over the Board of Immigration Appeals, the immigration judge function and the administrative law judge function; and serves the public interest through the uniform interpretation and application of immigration law.

The Board of Immigration Appeals is a quasi-judicial organization located in Falls Church, Virginia (a headquarters location). The Board hears oral argument only in that location. The Board has been given nationwide jurisdiction to hear appeals from decisions entered by district directors of the INS and by immigration judges, in a wide variety of proceedings in which the Government of the United States is one party and the other party is either an alien, a citizen or a business firm. Decisions of the Board are binding on all INS officers and immigration judges unless modified or overruled by the Attorney General, and are subject to judicial review in the federal courts.

The Office of the Chief Immigration Judge includes a Headquarters staff, and immigration judges located in field offices nationwide, who preside at formal, quasi-judicial deportation and exclusion proceedings. In addition, the immigration judges have jurisdiction to consider applications for various forms of discretionary or mandatory relief, including applications for asylum, adjustment of status, suspension of deportation, and waivers of excludability. Their decisions are administratively final unless appealed or certified to the Board of Immigration Appeals.

The Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer (OCAHO) provides overall program direction for the Administrative Law Judges (ALJs) to adjudicate cases arising under Sections 101 and 102 of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, which concern allegations of unlawful employment of aliens and unfair immigration-related employment discrimination. Such judicial proceedings will be initiated by complaints filed with OCAHO and referred to ALJs. Cases are brought before the ALJs by attorneys of the INS for employer sanction cases and by the Office of Special Counsel for Immigration Related Unfair Employment Practices in anti-discrimination cases. The ALJs hold hearings and related administrative proceedings and render decisions on the complaints filed before them.

The Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer is located in Falls Church, Virginia, and hearings are conducted there, in its San Diego field office, and in various other locations across the country, as near as practicable to the locations of alleged violations.

U.S. PAROLE COMMISSION

UNITED STATES PAROLE COMMISSION

Introduction

The United States Parole Commission, established by the Parole Commission and Reorganization Act of 1976, is an independent agency in the Department of Justice, created to carry out a national parole policy. The Commission has parole jurisdiction over all eligible federal prisoners and continuing supervisory jurisdiction over those who are released on parole or as if on parole (mandatory release).

Functions

The Commission has the sole authority to grant, modify, or revoke paroles of eligible U.S. prisoners serving sentences of more than one year and D.C. Code prisoners housed in Federal institutions. It is responsible for the supervision of parolees and prisoners released upon the expiration of their sentences with allowances for statutory good time; and for the determination of supervisory conditions and terms. The Commission may discharge parolees early from supervision. The Commission also issues summonses or warrants for violation of parole or mandatory release.

Under the Landrum-Griffin Labor Act and the Employees Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, the Commission is responsible for special hearings and decisions about employment restrictions applicable to individual ex-offenders.

The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 gave the Commission jurisdiction over all foreign transfer treaty cases beginning January 1, 1989.

The Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 abolished the United States Parole Commission and initiated mandatory sentencing, using sentencing guidelines. The Commission, however, will continue to have responsibility for all eligible offenders whose crimes were committed prior to November 1, 1987. The Commission will remain in operation until November 1, 1997.

Field Staff

The Commission is directed by commissioners appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The commissioners form a policy and rule-making body that holds formal meetings at least quarterly. The Chairman of the Commission is designated by the President from among the commissioners. The Chairman designates commissioners to serve on the National Appeals Board and designates commissioners to serve as the regional commissioners in the regional offices. The Chairman and the National Appeals Board are located in Chevy Chase, Maryland and the regional offices are distributed in various geographic locations throughout the country.

Each Regional Office is responsible for the parole functions pertaining to eligible federal prisoners confined in any correctional institution within that region and for all federal parolees and mandatory releasees within those boundaries. A corps of Hearing Examiners is assigned to the Regional Offices to conduct personal parole hearings with eligible federal prisoners. They also conduct personal hearings with alleged parole or mandatory release violators and hold revocation hearings as required at certain state institutions, local jails and at United States Courthouses.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE FOR U.S. TRUSTEES

EXECUTIVE OFFICE FOR U.S. TRUSTEES

Introduction

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978 established the U.S. Trustee Program as a pilot effort in 10 geographic areas encompassing 18 Federal judicial districts. The program was expanded nationwide by the "Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustee, and Family Farmer Act of 1986".

The mission of the U.S. Trustees is to ensure compliance with the bankruptcy laws and to supervise the administration of bankruptcy cases and trustees, leaving traditional judicial functions as the sole concern of bankruptcy judges. The U.S. Trustees handle the administration and oversight of cases filed pursuant to chapters 7, 11, 12 and 13 of Title 11, United States Code, "The Bankruptcy Code." The U.S. Trustees' Program is funded by the United States Trustee System Fund, which consists of fees assessed against those invoking the protections of the bankruptcy laws.

The U.S. Trustee Program

The Bankruptcy Judges, United States Trustee, and Family Farmer Act of 1986 provides for 21 separate U.S. Trustee regions covering the 94 judicial districts. Each region is headed by a U.S. Trustee appointed by the Attorney General for a five-year term.

The U.S. Trustee program now has offices in 89 cities. The program currently serves 88 of the nation's 94 federal judicial districts. The remaining six districts, in North Carolina and Alabama, are exempt from the program until 2002, unless these districts choose to become part of the program earlier.

The U.S. Trustees establish, supervise and maintain panels of private trustees to serve in chapter 7 liquidation cases and supervise the standing trustees who administer chapter 12 and chapter 13 cases. In chapter 11 cases, in which businesses or individuals continue to operate as debtors in possession, the United States Trustees play a particularly active administrative role. This role includes appointing committees of unsecured creditors and, when appropriate, committees of security holders, requiring debtors to file monthly financial reports, and ensuring that current tax liabilities are paid and adequate insurance coverage maintained. The U.S. Trustees' statutorily mandated duties also include monitoring the employment and compensation of professionals in a case and policing the system for criminal activity or abusive filings.

COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

Introduction

The mission of the Community Relations Service (CRS) is to provide conciliation and mediation services to communities and persons in resolving disputes, disagreements, or difficulties relating to discriminatory practices, based on race, color, or national origin, that impair the rights of citizens under the Constitution or United States laws.

CRS operates under two statutory authorities. Under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, CRS assists communities in resolving disputes based on allegations of race, color, or national origin discrimination through mediation and conciliation. Under the Refugee Assistance Act of 1980, CRS awards and administers grants and cooperative agreements to organizations for resettling Cuban and Haitian entrants.

Field Staff

The Service fulfills its mission by providing on-site dispute resolution assistance through its field staff of mediators and conciliators working out of ten CRS regional offices. Under its mandate, it is not restricted to issues stemming from alleged violations of a particular antidiscrimination statute, but can offer assistance in resolving any problem relating to race, color, or national origin discrimination. The Service not only aids in resolving disputes and difficulties as they erupt, but also seeks to assist and support communities in developing local mechanisms to address future problems.

The CRS offers its assistance either on its own motion, when in its judgment, peaceful relations among the citizens of a community are threatened; or upon request of appropriate State or local officials or other interested persons. The cooperation of the appropriate State and local, public and private agencies is sought in carrying out the agency's mission.

CRS also is responsible for continuing efforts to integrate into the United States almost 180,000 Cubans and Haitians who have entered the country since 1980 without documentation or imminent prospects of returning to their homelands. Effective March 6, 1983, CRS assumed responsibility for the Cuban/Haitian Reception Processing Program, substantially increasing its role in assisting with refugee-immigrant problems.

Under its resettlement authority, CRS provides reception, processing and care of Cubans and Haitians. Additionally, CRS draws on its Cuban/Haitian resettlement experience to assist the Immigration and Naturalization Service in providing shelter care and related services to alien families and unaccompanied minors.

CRS' resettlement and shelter care programs provide a variety of social, counseling, healthcare and medical, recreational, and educational services.

CRS also makes its services available to the judiciary. Federal district courts refer cases to CRS dealing with housing, allegations of excessive use of force by police, multi-district school desegregation, and bilingual education programs.
